HONG KONG, THE DARKNESS AND THE LIGHT REVEALED.

For very good journalism, accurately reported and written, see Shibani Mahtani and Timothy McLaughlin, Protestors Focus on Hong Kong's Airport, Snarling Transport Links After Day of Violence, WASHINGTON POST online Sunday, September 1, 2019. In easily understandable, solid reporting, this article informs about:

- the reasons for the protests,
- the violent reactions of Communist China and their thugs,
- the decline in professionalism among those who now wear the uniforms of the once-respected Hong Kong Police Force, and
- the hardships reluctantly cast upon the tourists using Hong Kong's face upon the world, its airport, such as the words of this man from the Philippines who walked an hour-and-a-half to the airport from the last train station that the government left open, so that he could catch his flight back to Manila:

"I understand what they [the protestors in Hong Kong] are fighting for.

They are young people fighting for their future."

The reporters carefully report the fact that this person made his flight.
